Here are 4 ideas for your staff Christmas party in 2017....

1. Family Fun Day

In this age of working longer hours, flexible working arrangements and technology making work accessible 24/7, the contribution of families is vital in the success of a business. Family fun days can be a great way to acknowledge and involve both staff and families in a fun, relaxed and social environment with something for all ages to enjoy. When organising family fun days, some things to consider are catering and entertainment for both kids and adults, what infrastructure needs to be brought in, applying for permits for outdoor venues, and conducting a risk assessment.

2. Christmas Team Challenge

If your team enjoys problem solving or adventure type activities, a fun daytime team building event followed by a barbecue and drinks may be ideal for you. Some team building programs like Mission Impossible and City Scramble provide the opportunity to explore your region, and others like Survivor and Beach Olympics are perfect to enjoy a beautiful location. We have also designed Christmas-themed team building activities for corporates such as Hunt For Santa's Sleigh, Christmas Cluedo and Christmas Dinner to combine fun with various bonding exercises.

3. Charity Team Building

To enjoy the spirit of 'giving' this Christmas, a great option for your staff Christmas event may be a charity-focused team building program. They are fun, they are team-oriented and, most importantly, they provide a gift to those less fortunate. Bikes For Tykes, Toys For Tykes and Formula One Kart will put a smile on many disadvantaged children's' faces. Give A Dog A Home will provide shelter for four-legged friends in need. Whilst Charity Chef will help put food on a family's table.

4. Festive Company Conference

Holding your staff conference in the lead-up to Christmas is a good opportunity to combine strategic planning, professional development, team building and festive fun in the one corporate event. It may be perfect timing for you to plan for 2018 or update staff on plans, provide some corporate training opportunities and then let your hair down for Christmas with an evening dinner or cocktail function. A festive company conference will provide a positive injection into your company's culture and take advantage of everyone's creativity and high spirits at this time of year.
